As many as five Bollywood actors were in Delhi on Thursday to promote various social causes

STAR SHOWER IN THE CITY

Clockwise: Fawad Khan, Bipasha Basu, Sonam Kapoor, Rani Mukerji and Kareena Kapoor

Not just the rains, the Capital also experienced a star shower on Thursday. Actors Kareena Kapoor Khan, Rani Mukerji, Sonam Kapoor, Fawad Khan and Bipasha Basu jazzed up Delhi as they participated in various events. Kareena, who was here to promote the need for child-friendly schools, on behalf of UNICEF, said that she is satisfied with the education that her niece Samaira and nephew Kiaan, as well as Saif's children — Sara and Ibrahim — are receiving. "They are all benefitting from quality education ... they are very studious," Bebo said. Rani, who is still basking in the success of her recently-released film on human trafficking, visited an anti-sex trafficking NGO, Apne Aap Women Worldwide. "Trafficking is not a crusade against men, it's about some of those men who turn into animals. My motive (in the film) was to make women feel stronger and inspire them so that they can condemn these men," the 36-year-old said. Sonam Kapoor and Pakistani

What a day in Delhi!
Awesome and packed
... The National flag fluttering so beautifully here (sic)

Bipasha Basu, actor

actor Fawad Khan were also in town, as part of Sangam, a corporate social responsibility, to talk about the importance of safeguarding the future of the girl child. "We are happy to support the cause because our upcoming film stands for all khoobsurat (beautiful) girls. We call India 'Mother India' and yet we don't respect women ... it is time people started respecting women like they respect the country," said Sonam. Bipasha, too, was present for the event and also promoted her upcoming film while in the city. "What a day in Delhi! Awesome and Packed!," she tweeted.
